Medical bill from a service provider doesn’t look right?

Medical providers work with many different insurance companies and sometimes make mistakes. This article is to give you information about what you can do if you do not understand a charge and you are uncertain of the Humana Coverage and Benefits.

What should I do if I receive a medical bill from a provider that doesn’t look right to me?

If you receive a bill for services from a doctor’s office, hospital or other providers that is for more than what you were expecting, before paying the bill contact the provider’s office listed on the invoice to confirm that they are billing the Humana insurance correctly.

What should I do if I disagree with the Humana SmartSummary (Medicare Advantage Plan) or Summary of Benefits (Non-Medicare Plan)?

You may contact Humana and speak to a Customer Care specialist for both the Medicare and non-Medicare plans at 1-800-273-2509, Monday thru Friday, 8am to 8pm EST. At the conclusion of the call Humana will provide you with a customer service number, take note of that number in case you need it later.

What if I have reached out to both the provider and Humana and I still do not agree with the charges?

If you disagree that the service should have been covered, the provider does not think there is an error in billing, and Humana is indicating that based on the billing, it is not a covered benefit, you may contact MSU Human Resources for assistance at SolutionsCenter@hr.msu.edu or call 1-517-303-4434 (toll-free at 1-800-353-4434) Monday-Friday, 8 a.m.—5 p.m. EST. Provide MSU Human Resources with the customer service number you were given and they will work with Humana and you to understand the situation and an appropriate resolution.

Nov. 8 speaker to address Indigenous outreach, research

Christie M. Poitra, Ph.D. will provide an overview of outreach and research activities with Indigenous communities and tribal colleges throughout Michigan.

Poitra is the Interim Director of the MSU Native American Institute (NAI). She is a Turtle Mountain Chippewa (Pembina Ojibwa), with family ties to Little Shell.

An alumna of UC Berkeley, UCLA and Michigan State University, Poitra is an affiliate faculty member in the American Indian & Indigenous Studies Program, and core faculty in the Gender Center for Global Context. She is an elected member of the Faculty Senate and University Council.

Poitra is the recipient of the Distinguished Community Partnership Award, and Excellence in Diversity Award. Prior to NAI, Dr. Poitra was appointed for several years in the MSU Office of K-12 Outreach where she worked on issues of instructional leadership in diverse school contexts.
Meet the MSU Cyclotron Lab’s own ‘hidden figure’

Professor Thelma Irene Arnette (1920-2017) was the third person hired (the other two were Prof. Henry Blosser and Prof. Morton Gordon) to design the first cyclotron (the “K50”) at Michigan State University around 1960.

She would go on to become an Assistant Professor of Physics in 1962 and earned tenure at MSU in 1967 in the Department of Physics and Astronomy without ever having earned an official degree in Physics.

Prior to coming to MSU, she and her sister, Mary Ruth, were two of 300 women that performed scientific and technical work on the Manhattan Project during WWII according to the book “Their Day in the Sun: Women of the Manhattan Project” by Dr. Ruth H. Howes and Dr. Caroline C. Herzenberg.

Prof. Arnette then performed a variety of experimental, mathematical, and computational tasks, now declassified, at Oak Ridge National Lab before being recruited to MSU’s Cyclotron Project.

Jaideep Taggart Singh, an associate professor at the Facility for Rare Isotope Beams and the Department of Physics and Astronomy, will present information about Arnette’s time at Oak Ridge on Thursday, Oct. 21, at 11 a.m. via Zoom. Please watch for sign in information in an E-Notice from MSU-RA.

We are interested in hearing from retirees who worked with Arnette and hope you will join in on the discussion.

MSU Retiree Sue Carter makes impact as a priest in France

From lecture halls, to the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary to a small Episcopal church in Clermont-Ferrand, France, Sue Carter has made her impact in each space she has entered. With countless achievements to her name, Carter uprooted her life in Michigan to pursue what she says was her “call to priesthood.”

Ordained a priest in 2008, Carter’s journey to ordained ministry began years before she retired.

“A call to ordained ministry is a wonderful and mysterious thing,” said Carter. “I certainly did not plan for it to be a retirement career.”

Even while teaching at MSU, Carter went through extensive training as a part of the Episcopal Church’s discernment. She spent time learning to pastor, seminar training and serving in hospitals, where she worked overnights and weekends at a hospital in Detroit.

“It was a very powerful experience,” she said.

After 28 years as a professor at MSU, parish ministry and time served as a chaplain in the Coast Guard Auxiliary, Carter was ready to retire and did so in 2020. But a small Episcopal church in France was looking for a part-time priest, and she happened to read about it.

“It was immediately apparent to me that it was a place where I could make a contribution,” Carter said. “My spouse and I talked and agreed that I should apply.”

Carter had previously lived in France for six years and was familiar with the language and life in the city, though some things like supermarkets and public transportation have changed since she first lived there.

“The first time I lived in France spanned 1958-64,” Carter said. My father was a civilian employee of the U.S. Air Force, and he worked at the military base at Châteauroux, in the Loire Valley of central France. While there I came to appreciate this country and understand that it is a second home.”

Now settled in a lovely living quarter on an old seminary that ironically overlooks a cemetery, Sue said she is fairly adapted to life in France, thanks to the people in the Christ Church parish. At Christ Church, they use English as their language of worship, though they pray in both English and French.

“The Church has been so welcoming, from the moment that we were met at the airport,” Carter said. “Temporary housing was arranged, several days of meals were delivered, and on a longer stretch, members shared their knowledge of maneuvering through a different bureaucracy to gain official resident status.”

She looks forward to traveling around Europe as COVID restrictions continue to relax, as well as connecting with Activities Europe, the U.S. Coast Guard unit in The Netherlands.

Please see SPARTAN SPOTLIGHT on page 5
“We’ve met virtually, and it’s time to go see the ‘Coasties’ there,” she said.
France has been aggressive with COVID restrictions, as they had lockdowns and nationwide curfews.
“Much of this country is getting vaccinated. It’s a challenge to pastor a new parish rather remotely - that is via Zoom — and yet we are all working hard at it,” Carter said. “We are yearning to return to some balance of normality.”
Carter said that life is smoothing out and that they are moving to in-person worship, with set protocols in place to keep everyone safe.
There is one thing that Carter misses from the States, a beverage most Michigan natives are familiar with: Diet Vernors.
“The bishop of the Convocation of Episcopal Churches in Europe, the Rt. Rev. Mark Edington, is also from East Lansing,” she said. “As a treat, I brought three cans of Diet Vernors for him. He’s also a big fan of one of Michigan’s best.”
She also misses her time spent with faculty colleagues on projects, documentaries and Education Abroad Programs.”
Carter pursued a broadcasting career before teaching journalism at Wayne State and later MSU in 1991. In 2005, she left the School of Journalism to serve as Secretary of the Board of Trustees to two of MSU’s presidents. She returned to the J-School and served until she retired in January 2020.
Carter received numerous awards for her work and was even inducted into the Michigan Journalism Hall of Fame. She became a voice for survivors and student athletes when MSU’s president appointed her as MSU’s NCAA Faculty Athletic Representative for the Big Ten in 2014, in which she served for 4 years.
Though she no longer devotes her time helping students earn degrees, she continues to earn them herself. Since 2004, Carter has earned three degrees, most recently a doctorate in history. She studied and taught students abroad and even wrote a book, Ordinary Women, which details her experiences of leading the first all-women’s ski trek to the North Pole from Russia.
It is challenging to define Carter’s distinctive career by one place or experience. She shares her inspiration to continue seeking new opportunities and experiences.
“There is a wonderful line in a song in the musical Pippin: ‘I want my life to be something more than long.’ Let me add to that, that I hope to have a positive impact and leave this life giving more than I have taken,” she said.
Carter has certainly given to so many, serving thousands that come from all over the world. As for what she will do next? She says she suspects some “heavenly direction” to help dictate that.
Building the future for Spartan families

Founded in 1949 with the goal of keeping retired staff members engaged with the university and community happenings, the MSURA now serves largely as an advocate for Spartan families, both retired and current.

Through the work of its dedicated members, who have already endowed two scholarships, head way is being made to endow a third through the MSURA Student Endowed Scholarship campaign, which recently met 78.5% of its $60,000 goal.

“You’re helping people just like you. Let’s contribute to future generations and help them and their families,” says longtime MSURA member Patrick Scheetz, who spent 30 years working at the university and has generously contributed to the scholarship.

The idea of a forming a scholarship came about in 2014, when a group of members felt passionate about making a difference for Spartan families. Since then, membership dues have been dropped and support for students has increased.

MSURA member and former Vice President of Development at MSU, Chuck Webb, has been an avid supporter, and used his experience to get the scholarship up and running.

“Although the MSURA was doing many good things and supporting our university, in my judgment, we had the potential of establishing an endowment scholarship fund benefiting both MSU, our staff, and administrative staff’s children and grandchildren.”

Between Chuck and his wife, Philippa, over 50 years have been spent working on campus. Through their body of work, they both recognize the importance of supporting the MSU community.

“MSU has been blessed by their outstanding staff. Here’s our opportunity to do what’s right, not for MSU, but the grandchildren and children of current and retired employees. Providing these recipients with a world class education is a privilege. What more noble cause can there be than to help educate the next generation?” he says.

As for Philippa, who spent her career at the Chuck Webb, former Vice President of Development at MSU, helped to spearhead the MSURA scholarship, which is exclusively reserved for the children or grandchildren of MSU retirees or current MSU employees. He and his wife, Phillipa Webb, who spent her years working in the College of Education, have contributed generously to the scholarship fund and encourage others to do the same.

The board of the Michigan State University Retirees Association announced the start of a three-year fund drive to support scholarships for students in April. This fundraising effort will extend from April 2021 to April 2024. With support from MSU retirees and friends, our goal is to raise $60,000 to increase our current scholarship endowment. $60,000 is the amount we need to permanently secure another MSURA scholarship on an annual basis.

College of Education, the constant interaction with students has given her great appreciation for the scholarship and all that it aims to accomplish.

“My goal was always to enable students to excel to their highest level within their capability. It’s better to give back, and we’ve had the sheer joy of watching these students grow and become great members of our society,” she says.

With thousands of MSU Retirees around the globe, collective support at any amount for the MSURA Student Endowed Scholarship will ensure education for generations of Spartan families.

Aug. 13 was a great night for a ballgame

About 36 retirees enjoyed an evening out at the Jackson Field in mid-August. The weather was perfect, the Lugnuts beat the Dayton Dragons 7-6 and the fireworks were worth the wait.

StraightLine is a fiduciary that was chosen by MSU to provide professional advice and management to both employees and retirees at MSU. Our experienced advisors and dedicated research staff allows us to offer unbiased information to the MSU faithful. We present the following for your review:

Straight to the Point

Market Update - Much of the more recent trends in markets have remained intact. Over the past several months we have seen relative outperformance of US stocks, led by large-cap growth. This has come during a period of rising COVID cases, with the Delta variant outbreak, falling bond yields, and in some cases, peaking economic data. As we move into the end of the year, however, we are starting to see signs of these trends reversing. Bond yields are off their lows and have plenty of room to move higher. Small-cap stocks and international equities have gained some momentum in recent weeks while cyclical sectors such as energy and financials have shown renewed signs of life.

Investment Implications - Our expectation for 2021 has been that the global economic recovery would lead to rising bond yields and higher stock markets (favoring economically sensitive areas). While this has largely been true, the Delta Variant has slowed the narrative - particularly in the middle of the year. After all of the noise, we expect that 2021 may very well end as it started, with another rally in cyclical stocks, waning COVID worries, and bond yields moving higher. We continue to advocate for a “barbelled” portfolio approach, which includes a mix of long-term growth and short-term cyclical rebound stocks on the equity side and a mix of short and long maturity bonds on the fixed income side.
